Outline:

The SensEd project brings together six key partners in a consortium and targets teachers and learners of VET schools and youth and adult learning centers, including learners who may be disadvantaged or disabled. SensEd hopes to convince other schools and education policy makers/leaders to seriously consider incorporating SSE within their own curricula. The SensEd project is innovative in its scope and aims and can bring about great changes within the teaching and learning sphere, without upsetting the status quo. We envisage impact on 4 levels: - partners: they will develop and enhance their knowledge, skills on SSE – staff members of partners: they will use the acquired knowledge, insights, skills as 'experts' in SSE and SSE-led curricula - the target groups: teachers will gain the knowledge, skills and confidence to develop and implement SSE modules alongside their normal curriculum; learners will gain important life, study and practical skills and become more motivated to learn - systemic: the importance of SSE will be disseminated and it is hoped that relevant stakeholders will incorporate more of it in traditional education models/curricula.
